Richemont to cede control of Yoox Net-A-Porter via Farfetch deal

Richemont is reversing course on a solo effort to build a luxury e-commerce platform and is preparing to cede control of Yoox Net-A-Porter via a deal with web-shopping specialist Farfetch. The move follows reports that activist investor Dan Loeb bought a stake in the Cartier owner, which has been struggling to turn its online business around since taking full control of it three years ago. Richemont shares rose as much as 9.8% Friday after the company also reported first-half earnings that beat estimates. Farfetch, a London-based luxury e-commerce company, is in advanced talks to buy a minority stake in Yoox Net-A-Porter, Richemont said Friday. The goal is for the unit, known as YNAP, to be a neutral platform with no controlling shareholder. Other luxury-goods makers will be invited to join as well, the owner of Vacheron Constantin said. While Chairman Johann Rupert is defusing a potential standoff with Loeb over YNAP, Richemont's founder said the move isn't a response to activist pressure. "We've been signaling this for a year now," Rupert said. "It's not activist pressure or anything at all." Some brands have been reluctant to join YNAP given that the platform is controlled by a competitor. Chief Financial Officer Burkhardt Grund said the company is in advanced talks with possible investors besides Farfetch, and Rupert said the company is open to selling stakes to luxury-goods rivals. Those talks will take place in the coming months, he said. Grund told reporters every shareholder would have less than 50% of YNAP's voting rights. YNAP also plans to use Farfetch's technology, and Richemont would put its brands on the rival's platform. Separately, Rupert said Richemont has made a "clear statement" that it's not for sale and not interested in mergers. Analysts have speculated the Swiss company would be a good partner for Gucci owner Kering SA. Richemont already has bought a stake in Farfetch's Chinese business, and a joint venture between the companies and e-commerce giant Alibaba Group Holding began operating in August. Last year when that deal was announced, Sanford C. Bernstein analyst Luca Solca said the alliance could be a precursor to Richemont spinning off YNAP and merging it with Farfetch or to selling it to Alibaba. Richemont also said operating profit rose to 1.95 billion euros ($2.2 billion) in the six months through September. Analysts expected 1.49 billion euros. "The post-Covid world is yet to emerge. For the second half of the year, volatility is likely to persist, including in terms of inflation and geopolitical tensions," Rupert said in the statement. He also warned that the company will face a more difficult comparison base.

Telkom burning through cash as warning signs pile up

Telkom burned through close to R1 billion cash in the most recent six months. It reported negative free cash flow of R839 million in the six months to end-September, a R1.05 billion swing from the R211 million positive figure reported in the first half of last year. It argues this is due to "an increase of R1.1 billion in capex paid in the period under review". This was caused by the Covid-19 lockdown in the first half of the last fiscal. This meant the operator had higher than normal capex in the second half, peaking in the fourth quarter. The operator settled a portion of Q4 capex (which was R3.3 billion) in the first half of this year which makes clean comparisons impossible. It has declined to reveal the actual figure, saying only that "in line with industry practice our general supplier payment terms are 90 days".

EUROPEAN MARKET COMMENTARY

SELECTED HEADLINES

European stocks finished the week higher Friday as global investors assessed recent high inflation prints and corporate earnings. The Stoxx 600 closed up by 0.3% provisionally, with most sectors and major bourses in positive territory. The pan-European benchmark was up 0.8% on the week. In terms of sectors, household goods led the gains Friday, up 1.9%, while oil and gas stocks were the worst performers, down 0.9%.

AMERICAN MARKET COMMENTARY

SELECTED HEADLINES

US stocks rallied Friday, but still posted their first losing week in six amid heightened inflation fears. Dow component Johnson & Johnson saw its shares rise 1.2% following a Wall Street Journal report that the company is splitting in two. Johnson & Johnson is reportedly breaking off its consumer health division into a separate publicly traded company. Mega-cap technology names provided support to the broader market. Facebook-parent Meta rallied 4%. Apple, Microsoft and Amazon each added more than 1%.

ASIAN MARKET COMMENTARY

SELECTED HEADLINES

Asian shares edged higher this morning as Chinese economic data surprised on the high side, challenging wagers the economy was stuck in a downturn although a decline in mainland house prices was a worry. Annual growth in retail sales and industrial output both handily beat forecasts, with the bounce in consumption a positive given pandemic restrictions. On a negative note, for the stressed housing market new home prices in China fell 0.2% month-on-month in October, the biggest decline since February 2015.

Gold prices eased this morning, pulling back from a more than five-month peak hit in the last session, as a firm dollar dimmed its appeal. Meanwhile, crude oil prices skidded earlier today, under pressure from expectations of higher supplies and weakening demand. Both crude markets have dropped for the last three weeks, hit by a strengthening dollar and speculation that President Joe Biden's administration might release oil from the U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve to cool prices.

SELECTED HEADLINES

The rand initially strengthened on Friday, building on gains made the previous day after the government pledged to cut the budget deficit and curb debt in its mid-term budget. However, at the close of the session the rand was trading around R15.35 to the dollar, 0.4% weaker. The dollar hovered below an almost 16-month high versus major peers this morning, as traders awaited fresh clues on the U.S. economy after bringing forward last week bets for a Federal Reserve interest rate hike on the back of red-hot inflation.
