SELECTED HEADLINES

Local stocks rose yesterday, with the Johannesburg Stock Exchange's Top-40 Index rising 1.26% to 64,281 points and the broader All-Share Index up 1.21% to 70,938 points. Investors are awaiting domestic inflation data, due alongside retail sales data later today, and the South African Reserve Bank's (SARB) monetary policy committee (MPC) meeting. A Reuters poll found 13 of 20 economists surveyed between Nov. 10-12 said the repo rate would be kept unchanged at 3.50%, while the other seven predicted a hike of 25 basis points. The SARB slashed its repo rate by 300 basis points last year to a record low as the economy battled the coronavirus crisis.

Stor-Age's share price spikes on stronger results

Self-storage property fund Stor-Age jumped just over 6% on the JSE on Tuesday, after its half-year to the end of September 2021 showed another strong financial performance. Stor-Age not only declared an interim dividend of 56.60 cents per share, but also reported an 8.85% increase in its dividend per share (dps) and has opted to give the market "guidance" by forecasting growth in distributions of between 6% and 8% for its full-year. The Cape Town-headquartered group, which has self-storage operations in SA's major cities as well as investments in the UK, continues to defy market conditions and outperform its JSE-listed peers, most of which focus on the retail, office and industrial property sectors. Some of these peers continue to withhold interim or full-year dividends in the face of the Covid-19 financial fallout. Like-for-like rental income was up 11.6% in SA and surged 23.8% in the UK. The fund's strong operational performance saw its net investment property value increase by 9.3%, to just over R7.95 billion. This is another key metric in which it has outperformed the market, with several JSE-listed Reits still reporting property devaluations or write-downs. Stor-Age also has a sector-low gearing or loan-to-value ratio of 25%.

Prosus sees H1 earnings per share up 400% on Tencent stake sale

Technology investor Prosus NV expects a large rise in earnings per share for the first half of its 2022 fiscal year, the firm said on Tuesday, as it gained proceeds of $12.3 billion from selling part of its stake in Tencent in April. In a premarket statement, Amsterdam-based Prosus said earnings per share for the six months that ended on September 30 would be up between 439% and 446% from $1.85 per share for the corresponding year-earlier period. It added that "core headline earnings" per share, a non-standard measure it uses to indicate operating performance, would be up 5% to 12% from $1.34 per share. That improvement was driven by an increase in the dividends it received from Tencent, in which it still holds a 28.9% stake worth 157 billion euros ($179 billion), after selling 2% in April.

Naspers forecasts lower interim headline earnings

South African media and internet company Naspers Ltd said on Tuesday it expects lower half-year headline earnings, hurt in part by higher finance costs. The company expects its headline earnings per share, a key profit measure for South African firms, to fall between 48 cents and 20 cents for the six months ended September 30, from 404 cents a year earlier.

European stocks closed higher on Tuesday as investors looked toward economic data and a fresh round of corporate earnings. The pan-European Stoxx 600 added 0.24% by the close, with oil and gas stocks gaining 1.1% while construction and material stocks dropped 0.5%. Tensions are escalating over Russia's alleged build-up of troops at the Ukrainian border, with NATO warning that it would be prepared to defend the sovereignty of Ukraine. Euro zone third-quarter GDP grew 2.2%, in line with expectations, Eurostat confirmed on Tuesday. Economic growth in the three months to the end of September was up 3.7% from the same period last year.

AMERICAN MARKET COMMENTARY

SELECTED HEADLINES

U.S. stocks gained on Tuesday after a strong October retail sales report and better-than-expected third-quarter results from Home Depot and Walmart signalled the U.S. consumer is still ramping up spending even in the face of rising prices. The latest retail sales figures for October showed consumers were increasing their spending, with sales jumping 1.7%. That compares to a 0.8% increase in the prior month. The report showed broad strength in a number of categories from autos to sporting goods. Online sales were up 10.2% from a year ago. The gains came even as consumer prices surged 6.2% year-over-year last month, inflation not seen since the 1990s.

Asia-Pacific stocks mostly declined earlier today, as Japan's exports growth hit an eight-month low. Markets in the U.S. however were lifted on the back of stronger-than-expected retail sales data. Exports in Japan rose 9.4% in October, Reuters reported, citing data from the country's finance ministry. That followed a 13% expansion in the previous month, and was the weakest growth since a drop in February. Auto shipments fell 36.7%. Shares of Japanese automakers slipped in the morning. Nissan was down nearly 2%, Honda dropped 1.36%, and Mitsubishi Motor fell 2%.

Gold prices inched higher this morning but hovered around a recent low, after a jump in U.S. retail sales kept the dollar close to a 16-month high. Gold, often viewed as an inflation-hedge, has benefited from easy monetary policy during the pandemic, but any hike in rates should reduce bullion's appeal as higher interest rates raises the non-interest bearing metal's opportunity cost. Meanwhile, oil prices dropped earlier today after U.S. gasoline stocks fell more than expected last week, which could heighten pressure on the Biden administration to release oil from emergency reserves to cap soaring gasoline prices.

The rand was firm in early trade on Tuesday, holding on to gains made in the previous session, as traders awaited the central bank's monetary policy decision due later in the week. However, at the close of the session the rand was trading around R15.51 to the greenback, 1.73% weaker. The U.S. dollar hit a fresh high since March 2017 against the yen and traded close to a 16-month peak versus a basket of major peers this morning, as a run of strong economic data boosted bets for earlier Federal Reserve interest-rate hikes.
