

SPW GLOBAL EQUITY INCOME PORTFOLIO

31 DECEMBER 2024

PORTFOLIO DESCRIPTION AND INVESTMENT OBJECTIVE

The primary objective is to provide above-average total returns (capital plus income) over a medium to long-term investment horizon, by investing in ordinary shares listed globally. Management will typically not be trading orientated, holding concentrated equity positions reflecting the manager’s best ideas globally and limited to 10% individual positions.

The portfolio is characteristically dominated by companies with a global footprint and an impressive track record of growing profits and well-entrenched industry market positions.

WHY SELECT A PERSONAL PORTFOLIO

The portfolio is designed to meet the needs of investors looking for concentrated equity exposure through a directly held and actively managed portfolio of quality global shares reflecting our highest conviction views in respect of market groupings, sectors and fundamentals.

Volatility of portfolio returns could be high due to a combination of underlying equity volatility and the impact of foreign exchange fluctuations, which historically has been high.

GLOBAL ANALYSIS

PORTFOLIO ADVISERS COMMENTS

The Global Equity Income portfolio underperformed the MSCI World Index during the month, returning -2.76% while the index returned -2.61%.

The best-performing stock in December was Alphabet (+14.0%). Alphabet is Google's parent company and during the month announced an updated version of its artificial intelligence (AI) offering, called Gemini. Alphabet has over the past two years been viewed as an AI laggard, in the shadow of first-mover OpenAI. However, the market narrative seems to be changing, and the various updates will help the Gemini large-language model with performance improvements and end-user cost reduction. We see an easier path to AI monetisation for Alphabet versus competitors given the already high user base for Google Docs, Sheets and YouTube, applications we expect to make significant use of AI tools moving forward.

In December, Alphabet also announced its new quantum AI chip called Willow. Willow is able to perform a computation in under five minutes that would take a top-range supercomputer 10 septillion years (10 followed by 25 zeros). Although this is unlikely to be commercialised any time soon, the market is excited to see Alphabet at the forefront of innovation in emerging technologies.

Other strong performers during the month were Kering (+7.4%) and Tencent (+6.7%). The luxury goods sector saw price support following a positive sell-side note highlighting the low valuations as supportive heading into 2025.

In terms of laggards, UnitedHealth Group (-15.4%) and Electronic Arts (-9.1%) both underperformed. UnitedHealth was left reeling by the assassination of one of its key executives, Brian Thompson. This led to a wider conversation about whether UnitedHealth practices have resulted in patients being denied their claims for medical treatments. This has weighed on the stock, but we remain positive on the outlook for the company. There was no specific news around Electronic Arts, but a new game released in November led to the stock rallying on the chances that it may prove to be another blockbuster. Player numbers on tracked platforms were tepid in December, leading to a weaker stock price.

For 2024, the strategy returned 11.72% versus 18.67% for the benchmark. Given that a small number of names have had a remarkable impact on the overall market over the past three years, we remain highly selective in which names we want to own. December exhibited some of the worst breadth in history while stock indices have remained near all-time highs. Investors have reverted to familiar behaviour, such as bidding up shares of mega-cap technology giants. There is a growing propensity for investors to use price momentum as a key factor in their investment strategy, something we have discussed at length before. Rebalancing has also been de-emphasised as many investors have let their winners run given the lack of mean reversion over the past several years. This all helps to explain the extreme concentration we're seeing in many equity markets, and not just in the US. To put things in perspective, Nvidia, Apple, Amazon, Meta, Broadcom and Tesla were the biggest contributors to returns for global equity markets in 2024. Their combined weight was 15% of MSCI Global but they contributed 45% of the total return of the global equity market in 2024. This is not a healthy trend for an index investor when valuations are extended. In our view, the environment of extreme narrowness will benefit stock-pickers such as ourselves. With the Magnificent 7 again dominating returns this year, any change in this dynamic may benefit our strategy.
